AVALON HILL

COMPUTER DIPLOMACY — Using a combination of strategy, tactics, diplomacy and intrigue, attempt to conquer early 20th century Europe. Become one of seven major powers: England, France, Germany, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Russia or Turkey, and become the first to gain control of 18 power centres to win the game. Six month turns. Units represent armies and fleets. Hi-res colour scrolling map displays the whole of Europe, with supply centres and ports. Tactical skills alone will not be sufficient, diplomacy and intrigue amongst players are just as important. Form alliances, cajole or threaten your way to supremacy. Can also be used in conjunction with the board-game as a 'gammemaster', or solo play for practising tactical strategies. Printout option available. Comes with Instruction Manual, Gamers Guide and pad of Conference Maps. Keyboard control. Save game feature. Playing time: 4+ hours.

TSUSHIMA — in May, 1905, the Russian Baltic Fleet was on the last stage of its long voyage around the world to reach Vladivostock. The Japanese were ready and waiting to prevent this, and thus the stage was set for the only decisive and full-scale naval battle this century. Every major battleship and cruiser of both fleets are available in this simulation of tactical naval warfare. In the strategic phase each turn represents one hour. Course plot of up to nine hours to avoid the tedium of hour by hour movement and searching. Contact results in a tactical game of five minute turns. Each ship is rated for speed, armour and damage. Main and secondary guns are rated for size, range and ammunition. In solitaire the computer plays the Russians. Tactical game included. Keyboard control. Includes manual of rules and ships data. Game save feature. Playing time: Full game 5+ hours/Tactical 1-3 hours.

BRODERBUND

THE ANCIENT ART OF WAR — based on Sun Tzu's book "The Art of War," this game lets you command troops in 11 different campaigns. Also included is a game generator that lets you build maps and armies as you wish. Eight different computer opponents are available to give variety to each game. Uses a real time system that you can speed up or slow down repeatedly at any time during the game. Each unit is a squad of up to 14 troops, with a maximum of 20 squads per player. The map is two screens in size. You have archers, barbarians and swordsmen in your units. Terrain includes clear, bridges, forts, villages, forests, hills, mountains and rivers. When opposing squads are adjacent, combat occurs. You can zoom in and control the action, seeing each soldier move, shoot and fight. Each squad is rated for condition, food and march speed. You can join two small squads together, or create new detachments. Troops must be supplied, new units raised, forts besieged, supply lines cut, etc. The options allow you to change many of the basic rules of this game at the beginning of each campaign. Game save feature.

CHICKAMAUGA — in September of 1863, the Confederate Army of Tennessee struck the Union Army of the Cumberland in the north Georgia mountains near Chickamauga. The Confederates had been reinforced with two divisions from Lee's army under the command of General Longstreet. This game simulates both days of the battle. Includes strategic and tactical map screens. The map is 28 x 32 with each hex equal to 400 yards across. The game lasts 13 turns, with 11 day turns equal two hours each, and two night turns representing six hours each. Units are brigade level. The turn consists of separate order phases, simultaneous execution, and a review of the turn by the computer, displaying what took place. Units are infantry, cavalry, mounted infantry and H.Q.'s. Each unit is rated for strength, casualties, artillery, morale, fatigue and line of communications with H.Q.'s. Units can be in a variety of modes: march, cautious, attack, fire near, fire far, rest, wait and fortify. Options include three computer skill levels, playing with or without limited visibility, fatigue, morale and H.Q.'s. Solitaire for either side. Game save feature. Orders can be entered from either the keyboard or with a joystick.

EUROPE ABLAZE — the Air War over England and Germany 1930-1945. Three major scenarios simulate the changing fortunes of the battle, as Britain first faces overwhelming odds against the Luftwaffe during the Battle of Britain and finally becoming the bastion from which American daylight and British night bombing missions set out for Germany. Missions are planned twice per day and require target selection, course plotting, speed, squadron allocation and H-hour determination. Other operations include harassment, raid and recon missions. Fighter aircraft perform intercept and patrol (both standing and intruder patrols) ops in response to ground and radar sightings. Targets include cities, populations, industry, radar stations, airfields and shipping. Weather such as storm fronts, ground fog and moonlight affect planning for mission controls. Also national doctrine is included to reflect the historical handicaps or advantages to each side's strategy. Hi-res graphics and menu order system. Six command positions per side, any or all may be computer controlled allowing for solitaire or group play. Game save feature. Complete game design kit included, (with new scenario of the U.S. 15th Air Force operations in Italy in May, 1944) allows you to design your own scenario variants as well as designing original campaigns. Requires 64K.

Designed by Roger Keating, Eric Baker and Ian Trout

FLIGHT SIMULATOR II — highly detailed and advanced 3D flight simulator. Depending upon which computer you have: fly a Piper 181 Cherokee (Apple, Atari, C-64), a Cessna 182 (IBM), Cessna 182 or Gates Learjet 25G (Amiga, ST). Full instrumentation including speed indicator, altimeter, bank indicator, artificial horizon and full range of navigational aids. Many user-variable options including multiple views out of the cockpit, day, dusk and night flying modes, variable weather conditions including cloud cover, winds, fog and turbulence. Includes 3D flying areas (number dependent upon computer) with airports, radio beacons and famous landmarks. All versions have keyboard or joystick options (ST — mouse or keyboard only). Includes WW1 combat game. Save feature for user-designed flight scenarios. Comes with manual and flight area charts. (Amiga and ST versions have two player/computer option coming)

Designed by Bruce Artwick

Level 3

Apple, Atari, C-64, IBM, Amiga, ST £42.00

FOOTBALL — animated U.S. football simulation. Select your play and then control the quarterback and receiver in offence. In defence, select your defence and then control any one of the four primary defensive players. Two fictitious teams, based upon NFL and AFL sides, are available. Each player is rated for speed, power and catching abilities. You can alter the player ratings to give you many team variants. Select from 7 running plays and 6 passing plays on offence. Four formations and changing receivers or backs mid-play allow many play variations. On defence select from 3 run or 4 pass defences, blitz with any combination of linebackers. Change the controlled defender as the play develops. Includes field goals, punts, interceptions and time-outs. Display of the pitch and players from the sidelines. Joystick control. Comes with extensive manual including play diagrams and team rosters. Playing time 20 minutes to 2 hours.

JET — advanced real-time, 3D jet combat flight simulator. Fly a F-16 Fighting Falcon land-based or a F-18 Hornet carrier-based jet aircraft, on bombing missions or have dogfights with missiles and cannon against MiG-21 and MiG-23 aircraft. Weapons include Sidewinder and Sparrow AAM's, 20mm Vulcan cannon, AGM-65 missiles and MK-82 smart bombs. Heads Up Display includes G-force indicator, gunsight, weapons selector and radar. 3D hi-res colour graphics give you five different cockpit views, plus 'Control Tower Mode' with a view of your aircraft from the ground or carrier base. Menu options offer three different flight modes including 'free flight', to enable you to learn about your aircraft, weapons selection and nine different skill levels. Other options include keyboard and/or joystick control, 'zoom' facility on views and ejector seat to live to fly another day!
